Overview

SafeClinch Verbal De-Escalation training is designed for behavioral healthcare professionals who work directly in crisis situations. This training focuses on de-escalation techniques, risk assessment, and nonrestrictive interventions. Our training program is targeted for persons who provide services in the addiction industry. This course will teach the participant how to train healthcare staff to safely interact with individuals who are experiencing a crisis. This course is not meant to teach the participant crisis intervention techniques, but rather, how to lead a workshop in which participants gain competency in verbal de-escalation skills.

This a 12-hour Instructor Certification Program that combines online learning and instructor-led synchronous virtual instruction. The instructor-led synchronous virtual instruction is 1:1 instruction and is scheduled with the student upon successful completion of the online portion of the course.

How It Works

Online Course (10 hours): Before your individual instruction, you must complete an online curriculum, which includes an introduction to verbal de-escalation and nonviolent crisis intervention as well as valuable train-the-trainer review content. You will review course content, dig deeper into SafeClinch modules, and learn important facilitation strategies to maximize your training. You may begin the online portion of training immediately.

Live Synchronous Individualized Instruction (2 hours): Upon completion of your online course, you will schedule a 1:1 instruction session with the Director of the program. This will be scheduled via video conferencing. During this session you will have an opportunity to clarify any content. The instructor will assist you in organizing your content and prepare for your first training. The instructor will also role play common scenarios that may present during a training.

Optional Additional Instruction (1 hour): After your first training, you can schedule a second mentoring session with the director. During this session and revisions will be made to your format and you will have an opportunity to discuss your experience and receive additional instruction, if needed.

Upon completion of the online course, the live virtual training, and the online exam, you will be certified to teach the SafeClinch Verbal De-Escalation training program. This certification does not expire, you are not required to take recertification course. We may offer updates or refreshers occasionally; these will be at no cost to you.

About the Founder

Alan developed SafeClinch Training System, which is a crisis intervention program and has been training instructors at the Federal, State, and Local levels for over fifteen years. Alan possesses a Bachelor's Degree in Criminal Justice from Central Missouri State University in Missouri and a Master's Degree in Management from Baker University in Kansas. He has work experience in the private and public industry dealing with juvenile and adult special needs populations. His experience is in security operations; investigations; and programs. Alan has held various management roles and has an extensive background in classroom instruction. He has instructed classes in the following areas: use of force, use of mechanical restraints, emergency procedures, verbal de-escalation skills, and CPR to name a few. Alan also spent five years with the Missouri Criminal Investigations Bureau, as a Special Agent.

Alan has been actively involved with the martial arts disciplines of judo and jujitsu for over 20 years; and holds advance black belt certifications. This martial arts experience, coupled with his professional work with juvenile and adult special needs populations, has given him the insight to recognize the necessity for staff personnel to have more tools at their disposal when dealing with hostile and aggressive clients.

Alan serves as an expert witness and will conduct a critical incident review for any agency using the SafeClinch verbal de-escalation and physical restraint system. Alan is considered an expert in unarmed use of force scenarios through his experience teaching defensive tactics and working with out of control clients.

Alan is the owner and head instructor of Northland Grappling in Kansas City, Missouri
